The peculiarity of these reports was that up to the time the Grand Jury. at the instance of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, made its presentment regarding the existence of disorderly resorts in the city, on March 31, 1892, the captains mentioned large num-bers of disorderly houses and gambling

The lists were lengthy, and it took Mr. Moss a long time to read them.

The reports following this presentment referred to showed that all these disorderly places were closed up, and that not a single disorderly house, gambling, policy or lottery shop, or suspicious place of any kind had been in existence in either of the precincts for the past two years.

The reports for the Fourteenth Precincts were signed by Capts, McCullagh, Doherty and Cross, and the reports for the Eleventh Precitict by Capts. Devery, McLaughlin and Cortright. Resorts Open, but Reported Closed.

Despite the fact that the captains of those precincts had invariably reported that there were no houses of Ill-fame or places of illegal resort within their juriedictions, it appeared from reports made prospect of a long trial, and some of them were very gloomy. Any one who has travelled through the rocky lands of Sullivan County could appreciate the greatness of their sorrow and disappointment.

At 9,30 o'clock to-day Sheriff's Deputies Ira Porter, of Liberty, and Erastus B. Kniffin, of liethel, who had never seen each other before and were not on speaking terms, not having been introduced, brought the prisoner from the stuffy little fail back of the quaint little court-house into court.

The woman slayer of three fellow-mortals, whose only defense is that of insanity, is a commonplace woman of twenty-eight years, though she looks fifteen years older. Bhe has an unhealthy pallor, and is very thin, weighing not more than 119 pounds. She was clad in a gown of brown stuff, perfectly plaff and simple.

Contrary to all the precedents, as proclaimed by the good people gathered from all over the country, Lizzle Hailiday, whose defense is homicidal insanity, set quictly between the Sheriff's deputics, her head bowed so that her chin rested on her bosom. The brown, thatched head swayed from side to side, but the eyes were closed, and the rather expressionless face gave no sign of emotion, while District-Attorney David S. Hill told the jury of farmers the story of the crime for which the woman was to be tried.

beit, a shirt waist, and lastly, a cheap gold watch chain, and pendant heart of gold, as things she had seen Sarah J. McQuillan wear.

Then Mrs. Wright broke down and cried over some rings. She sobbed hysterically, that they were Sarah Jane's. Said she: "I know, because I have worn them myself many a time."

Sarah McQuillan was twenty years old. Old Thomas McQuillan, the husband and father of the murdered women, listened to this story, nodding his approval of it. He has been a hero since court convened yesterday and seems to enloy his distinction.

Joseph D. Osborn, the next witness, was also a Newburger. He saw Mrs. Halliday feeding her horse at the Gardentown Church sheds. Aug. 20 last, and Mrs. McQuillan was in the buckboard to which the horse was attached.

Margaret Arnot, of Collingham, Orange County, identified Mrs. Halliday as a person who applied at 11 o'clock, the night of Aug. 25 for lodgings, saying her conveyance had broken down.

"She said she was Mrs. Smith, and that she would be in no nurry to got up in the morning," said the witness. "She came again Aug. 23 at 7 o'clock She cam

"She said she was Mrs. Smith, and that she would be in no nurry to get up in the morning," said the witness. "She came again Aug. 29 at 7 o'clock. She said she was nervous on account of being out so late. It was terrible for a lady to be out at night."
George H. Carpenter, of Liberty, counsel for Mrs. Halliday, cross-examined the witness. He drew out that Mrs. Halliday had a flendish look on the occasion of both visits.

Mrs. Halliday told conflicting stories
